College of Arts and Humanities

In a world engaged upon the process of globalization, it is easy to forget that the building blocks of what we see around us tend to be our cultures, our histories, our art and our literatures. Preserving an understanding of these subjects is vitally important, if we are to continue to value cultural diversity and retain our essential humanity.

Thus, the disciplines in the College of Arts and Humanities have been a traditional cornerstone of higher education in all of the world's civilizations. Gaining an appreciation of the Arts and Humanities, either in general terms, or through the study of one specific academic area, helps us understand our present circumstances. Subjects such as literature and history are essential in understanding our modern situation and challenges, helping us to understand problems and identify solutions, based on solid and well thought out principles. The Arts and Humanities are about life – past life, present life and the development of future life. Examining these issues is both rewarding and directly relevant to personal learning and growth.

Graduates in the Arts and Humanities remain sought after by employers in both Cambodia and the world. They are valued for their transferable skills that serve them well in a broad variety of careers. These skills include excellent communication skills, the ability to analyze intelligently, a qualitative approach to issues and problems and the ability to work unsupervised individually or as part of a team. Perhaps the most valued quality of the Arts and Humanities graduate is the ability to be creative.

1. DEGREE OFFERINGS

Students in the College of Arts and Humanities can do a Bachelor of Arts degree in one of the following subjects:

- Asian Studies

- English Language and Literature

- Journalism

2. ADMISSION AND DEGREE REQUIREMENTS

In order to be admitted to study for a Bachelor's degree, an applicant must have a high school diploma or an equivalent; and take and pass the University of Cambodia Undergraduate Entrance Examination (under the auspices of the Ministry of Education, Youth and Sport) and the University of Cambodia English Placement Exam.

New students must spend their first year fulfilling the Foundation Year Program's requirements, as specified by the Accreditation Committee of Cambodia: this comprises eight General Education courses and two oriented subjects related to the student's major. A student must pass the Foundation Year in order to proceed into the second year programme.

In addition to the Foundation Year and other General Education requirements set by the University of Cambodia, Bachelor's degree candidates in the College of Arts and Humanities are required to take a minimum of a further 48 credit hours (the equivalent of sixteen courses) in their respective major. The remaining balance of credits are obtained by doing electives outside the major.

3. ASIAN STUDIES

The Asian Studies program at the University of Cambodia offers courses in most of the disciplines of the social sciences and the humanities, with an emphasis on their regional – East Asia, South Asia, and Southeast Asia – context. The program also offers a concentration in Southeast Asian Studies and Cambodian Studies, for students who want to take a more in-depth view of particular regions. In this way, students gain insights into Cambodia and its place in a regional context, in terms of the area's broad socio-cultural and economic diversity; and thus insights into how to foster and nurture beneficial relations with our neighbours.

Apart from fulfilling the Foundation Year and General Education requirements, students doing a Bachelor's degree in Asian Studies must take the other three major core courses (9 credits), along with thirteen major elective courses (39 credits). Of the remaining eleven elective courses (33 credits) which the student must take, up to a maximum of six courses (18 credits) can be from within the same College

College of Education

The recent decades of war and internal conflict have turned Cambodia into one of the poorest countries in the world, despite an abundance of natural resources. And, in spite of improvements in the human resources sector since 1979, social indicators are still at a low level compared with neighboring countries.

There is thus the need to promote the development and maturation of the latent potential of Cambodia's human resources, through the nurturing of the intellectual development and encouraging a culture of meritocracy. This requires the implacement of a dynamically-responsive education system, which can adapt and use the most appropriate modern pedagogical approaches in order to maximise returns on the investment (monetary and otherwise) made by both the administration and their prospective targets.

Our aim is to produce graduate teachers who can act as role-models and meet these expectations, and thus play a role in guiding Cambodia's future path.

College of Law

As Cambodia recovers from its traumatic past, and thereby modernizes and interacts more regionally and globally, there is an ever-growing need for professionals with an in-depth knowledge of our own country's rules of law; Cambodian and international regulations governing trade and commerce between countries; international conventions on the environment, labor, intellectual property, human rights; and also dispute resolution. Such knowledge is important for both policy development and advocacy work within Cambodia.

The College of Law aims to offer a curriculum whose breadth and depth is unmatched for legal education in Cambodia. The syllabus seeks to provide students with a solid educational foundation for their continuing intellectual, human and professional development as they build their future legal careers.

Rather than emphasizing any single area of Law, the College provides both introductory and advanced courses in every major area of legal endeavor. This varied and challenging educational program aims not just to give a good perspective on relevant legislative systems; but also to train students' thinking capabilities in order to help them assess (and seek to resolve) a variety of real-life situations – in legal practice, the government and other public service, academia, and business. As the Cambodian legal system evolves, together with those in the region and internationally, we will update our course-offerings accordingly.

Thus the mission of the College of Law is to provide students with the knowledge and skills essential for handling legal matters and so help to strengthen the Rule of Law in Cambodia. Related to this, the goals of the Law programmes at the University of Cambodia are to:

- enable students to acquire the knowledge and skills to deal with facts in relation to the concepts, principles, and theories of various types of legal issue;
- promote students' conceptions of legal rights at both national and international levels;
- prepare students to understand, interpret, analyze and apply legal rules,
- enable students to acquire drafting and legal analysis skills;
- develop students' abilities to practice legal critical thinking and solve problems;
- deepen students commitment to professional legal ethics and values.

There are three majors in our LLB program: Law, Public Law and Private Law.

- Public laws are those laws that are relevant to matters affecting the entire community, and concerns the relationship between individuals in the general population and the state. Thus, constitutional law, administrative law and criminal law are all sub-divisions of public law.

- Private laws are those which are most relevant to individuals and include, for example, laws relating to property ownership or employment contracts. Unlike public law, private law involves interactions between private citizens.

1. DEGREE OFFERINGS

Students in the College of Law can do a Bachelor of Laws degree in one of the following subjects:

- Law
- Public Law

- Private Law

2. ADMISSION AND DEGREE REQUIREMENTS

In order to be admitted to study for a Bachelor's degree, an applicant must have a high school diploma or an equivalent; and take and pass the University of Cambodia Undergraduate Entrance Examination (under the auspices of the Ministry of Education, Youth and Sport) and the University of Cambodia English Placement Exam.

New students must spend their first year fulfilling the Foundation Year Program's requirements, as specified by the Accreditation Committee of Cambodia: this comprises eight General Education courses and two oriented subjects related to the student's major: LAW101 (Introduction to Law) and LAW102 (Constitutional Law). A student must pass the Foundation Year in order to proceed into the second year programme.

In addition to the Foundation Year and other General Education requirements set by the University of Cambodia, Bachelor's degree candidates in the College of Law are required to take a minimum of a further 48 credit hours (the equivalent of sixteen courses) in their respective major. Of the other eleven elective courses (33 credits) which the student must take, up to a maximum of six courses (18 credits) can be from within the same College.

3. LAW

The Law programme is intended to enable students to acquire the legal knowledge and skills to deal with facts in relation to the concepts, principles, and theories of knowledge, skills; facts, concepts, principles, and theories of Law in general. This also provides students with both introductory and advanced courses in every major area of legal endeavor and conception of legal rights at both national and international levels

Apart from fulfilling the Foundation Year and General Education requirements, students doing a Bachelor's degree in the College of Law must take the other five major core courses (15 credits), along with seven major elective courses (21 credits). The College of Management (formerly the College of Public and Business Administration) has a threefold mission:

1. to attract, educate, and train high-quality individuals to become ethical leaders in the public and private sectors
2. to do research so as to advance knowledge, by using strong conceptual foundations to identify and solve management problems - focusing on national, regional, and global issues
3. to act as a focal point for developing the capacity of Cambodia's human resources in the fields of management, accounting, and economics.

Two-thirds of all Bachelor's courses taken are common for all students of the College. They involve introductory courses in various disciplines, designed to provide the necessary background for further in-depth study in one of the offered disciplines in College of Management's areas of concentration. They also aim to encourage the development of basic analytical, quantitative and computing skills. By the end of these, students will have developed a broad understanding of basic business principles, and so will be better able to make an informed choice regarding an area of specialization that suits their interests and career objectives.

The remainder of the program provides an in-depth study of a particular area of concentration, to compliment the student's breadth of knowledge across all functional areas of a business enterprise. During their final year, students have the option of undertaking a project under the supervision of a faculty member.

1. DEGREE OFFERINGS

Students in the College of Management can do a Bachelor of Arts degree in one of the following subjects:

- Accounting
- Business Management
- Economics
- Finance and Banking
- Hospitality and Tourism Management
- Human Resource Management
- International Business
- Marketing

2. ADMISSION AND DEGREE REQUIREMENTS

In order to be admitted to study for a Bachelor's degree, an applicant must have a high school diploma or an equivalent; and take and pass the University of Cambodia Undergraduate Entrance Examination (under the auspices of the Ministry of Education, Youth and Sport) and the University of Cambodia English Placement Exam.

New students must spend their first year fulfilling the Foundation Year Program's requirements, as specified by the Accreditation Committee of Cambodia: this comprises eight General Education courses and two oriented subjects related to the student's major: ACC101 (Principles of Accounting) and BUS101 (Introduction to Business). A student must pass the Foundation Year in order to proceed into the second year programme.

In addition to the Foundation Year and other General Education requirements set by the University of Cambodia, Bachelor's degree candidates in the College of Management are required to take a minimum of a further 48 credit hours (the equivalent of sixteen courses) in their respective major. Of the other eleven elective courses (33 credits) which the student must take, up to a maximum of six courses (18 credits) can be from within the same College.

3. ACCOUNTING

All accounting is characterized by compiling, analyzing, and reporting on the financial condition of the many functions of companies, nonprofit organizations, government agencies, and individuals. Accounting services thus generally include independent auditing, tax advice and tax return preparation, financial and management consulting, and entrepreneurial services.

The Accounting program at the University of Cambodia considers the processes involved in the collection, organization, and presentation of financial information for effective decision-making. It thus prepares students for careers such as the independent practice of public accounting, controllership, and general accounting management.

Apart from fulfilling the Foundation Year and General Education requirements, students doing a Bachelor's degree in Accounting must take ten other major core courses (30 credits), along with six major elective courses (18 credits). Of the remaining eleven elective courses (33 credits) which the student must take, up to a maximum of six courses (18 credits) can be from within the same College major elective

4. BUSINESS MANAGEMENT

The Business Management program is designed for students who aspire to eventually holding managerial positions in various private-sector organizations, be they small or large, local or international.

It thus aims to give a solid grounding in business theory, and how this is put into practice in various types of applied situations. The coverage also ensures that a student gets a good foundation into other aspects of running a business, including – for example – keeping accounts, human resource management, and the use of technological applications.

Apart from fulfilling the Foundation Year and General Education requirements, students doing a Bachelor's degree in Business Management must take ten other major core courses (30 credits), along with six major elective courses (18 credits). 6. FINANCE AND BANKING

The Finance and Banking program prepares students for management careers in the financial services industry, and also in the public sector. It is designed to equip the student with both theoretical and practical knowledge of how the rapidly-changing financial services industry affects, and is affected by, the modern business environment. The theoretical base is counterbalanced by courses relating to financial institutions and the relationships between these institutions. Students are thus familiarized with advanced problem-solving techniques, and trained in ways of transforming relevant information into coherent decision-making.

Apart from fulfilling the Foundation Year and General Education requirements, students doing a Bachelor's degree in Finance and Banking must take ten other major core courses (30 credits), along with six major elective courses (18 credits). 8. HUMAN RESOURCE MANAGEMENT

The Human Resource Management (HRM) Program prepares students for a career in the management of human resources in organizations. Among other things, students will learn to understand people's behavior, in particular in a working environment; to improve the working conditions of people; to understand the Cambodian working environment and to identify career opportunities; to identify social problems; to communicate clearly and meaningfully with people; to undertake planning, recruitment and selection of human resources professionally, tocarry out the awareness of compensation and benefits, health safety as well as to deal with problems in labor relations.

The BA programme will provide the students with the skills and knowledge to operate in a professional capacity in HRM, which plays a vital role in the performance of today's organizations considering the impact of globalization, i.e., the diverse workforce. The course covers both specialized areas in human resource and general management which ensures the students to have the flexibility to pursue a generalist management or specialist HR role.

Apart from fulfilling the Foundation Year and General Education requirements, students doing a Bachelor's degree in Human Resource Management must take ten other major core courses (30 credits), along with six major elective courses (18 credits). Of the remaining eleven elective courses (33 credits) which the student must take, up to a maximum of six courses (18 credits) can be from within the same College major elective.

10. MARKETING

The Marketing program aims to provide an in-depth understanding of the principles and practice of marketing for students who have a foundation of business knowledge. It thus is concerned with a detailed consideration of marketing concepts and techniques; an understanding of the role of marketing within an organizational context; and how this knowledge can be applied in a range of specialist marketing environments. The program produces highly practical marketing graduates.

Apart from fulfilling the Foundation Year and General Education requirements, students doing a Bachelor's degree in Marketing must take ten other major core courses (30 credits), along with six major elective courses (18 credits). College of Science and Technology

In various forms, science and technology have played an important role in the development of all civilisations; this was particularly the case the past century, and science and technology promise to be of ever-increasing importance for our lives in the present century.

The courses offered by the College of Science and Technology not only aim to provide the students with a solid knowledge-base about selected disciplines. As should be the case with any good institute of higher learning, more advanced-level courses, in particular, are of sufficient depth to contribute to the students' intellectual development by training them to think clearly and creatively in a focused manner. This is to give them confidence in tackling and solving problems; including the communication of their results to others.

The mission of the College of Science and Technology is to produce graduates who have a good grounding in science and technology; and who thus have both the knowledge and the ability to use it to contribute to Cambodia's future socio-economic development.

1. DEGREE OFFERINGS

Students in the College of Science and Technology can do a Bachelor of Science degree in one of the following subjects:

- Computer Science
- Electronics and Telecommunications
- Information Technology

2. ADMISSION AND DEGREE REQUIREMENTS

In order to be admitted to study for a Bachelor's degree, an applicant must have a high school diploma or an equivalent; and take and pass the University of Cambodia Undergraduate Entrance Examination (under the auspices of the Ministry of Education, Youth and Sport) and the University of Cambodia English Placement Exam.

New students must spend their first year fulfilling the Foundation Year Program's requirements, as specified by the Accreditation Committee of Cambodia: this comprises eight General Education courses and two oriented subjects related to the student's major: ITE102 (Introduction to Computer Programming C++) and either ITE103 (Introduction to the Internet) or ITE104 (Logic and Computation). A student must pass the Foundation Year in order to proceed into the second year programme.

In addition to the Foundation Year and other General Education requirements set by the University of Cambodia, Bachelor's degree candidates for the existing programmes in the College of Science and Technology are required to take a minimum of a further 48 credit hours (the equivalent of sixteen courses) in their respective major. Of the other eleven elective courses (33 credits) which the student must take, up to a maximum of six courses (18 credits) can be from within the same College.

3. COMPUTER SCIENCE

The Computer Science programme concentrates on computer and network hardware systems; their design and management; and programming principles and languages.

Apart from fulfilling the Foundation Year and General Education requirements for this major, students doing a Bachelor's degree in Computer Science must take eleven other major core courses (33 credits), along with five major elective courses (15 credits). Of the remaining eleven elective courses (33 credits) which the student must take, up to a maximum of six courses (18 credits) can be from within the same College

5. INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY

Information Technology is based on the systematic study of algorithmic processes – their theory, analysis, design, implementation, and application; and applying this knowledge to solve problems – creating the right model and then devising an appropriate computer manipulation for a solution. Thus, even though it is a relatively new field, Information Technology touches virtually every area of human endeavor.

The Information Technology curriculum is both problem-solving and applications oriented. Graduates will find ready employment in almost any area of computer use: managing networks, developing software solutions, or designing systems for organizations, businesses, and government institutions.

Apart from fulfilling the Foundation Year and General Education requirements for this major, students doing a Bachelor's degree in Information Technology must take eleven other major core courses (33 credits), along with five major elective courses (15 credits). Of the remaining eleven elective courses (33 credits) which the student must take, up to a maximum of six courses (18 credits) can be from within the same College

College of Social Sciences

The courses offered by the College of Social Sciences aim to train students to think independently, critically, systematically and creatively. By encouraging them to develop an analytical approach, the different courses to provide students with the opportunity to analyze and assess human behavior in its socio-cultural contexts relevant to history, space and time. In this way, they will better appreciate the diversity of the world and the complexity of the human condition; and have a better understanding of human existence focused on respect, tolerance, and morality.

In addition, we hope to inspire students by engaging them in empirical and qualitative research as a tool for explaining social phenomena, In this way, their research findings will be of benefit for policy development purposes in the renaissance of Cambodia. Related to this is the aim of developing the students' ability to analyze critically the foundations upon which cultural dimensions are built, and to communicate their ideas effectively.

1. DEGREE OFFERINGS

Students in the College of Social Sciences can do a Bachelor of Arts degree in one of the following subjects:

- Development Studies
- International Relations
- Political Science
- Public Administration
- Public Policy

2. ADMISSION AND DEGREE REQUIREMENTS

In order to be admitted to study for a Bachelor's degree, an applicant must have a high school diploma or an equivalent; and take and pass the University of Cambodia Undergraduate Entrance Examination (under the auspices of the Ministry of Education, Youth and Sport) and the University of Cambodia English Placement Exam.

New students must spend their first year fulfilling the Foundation Year Program's requirements, as specified by the Accreditation Committee of Cambodia: this comprises eight General Education courses and two oriented subjects related to the student's major: POL101 (Introduction to Political Science) and PST102 (Human Rights and Global Justice). A student must pass the Foundation Year in order to proceed into the second year programme.

In addition to the Foundation Year and other General Education requirements set by the University of Cambodia, Bachelor's degree candidates in the College of Social Sciences are required to take a minimum of a further 48 credit hours (the equivalent of sixteen courses) in their respective major. Of the other eleven elective courses (33 credits) which the student must take, up to a maximum of six courses (18 credits) can be from within the same College..

3. DEVELOPMENT STUDIES

As noted by the Asian Development Bank (2005: "Country Strategy and Program, 2005–2009", Kingdom of Cambodia) and others, Cambodia's economy is based on the remaining (but remorselessly dwindling) natural and socio-cultural assets; and it must continue to be so, in the near future. In particular, two main sets of assets have been identified.

1) Agriculture, fisheries and forestry are a major source of revenue: the sustainable development of these income-generators, rather than their short-sighted exploitation, constitutes a major aspiration of the 2004–2008 Cambodia Rectangular Strategy

2) The tourist industry is another major source of foreign income; whilst this is mainly related to the country's pre-colonial archaeological heritage, eco-tourism represents a potential new growth area in other regions of the country (reflected by proposals regarding the need for conservation in the 2004–2008 Cambodia Rectangular Strategy).

However, Cambodia faces many problems. In common with the rest of the world, there is the fact of increasing environmental degradation, as a result of pollution and other forms of ecological mismanagement. This is accentuated because of poverty and a lack of proper, enforceable legislation with regard to the long-sighted control of waste-disposal, mining and the exploitation of other resources.

The Development Studies program focuses on an interdisciplinary approach in international development as applied to developing countries and emerging economies, with a special focus on the Asia-Pacific region. The interdisciplinary approach to our program includes insights from Anthropology, Economics, Sociology, Political Science, and the Environment. Thus, the syllabus provides students with the opportunity to study issues in depth, taking into account a variety of perspectives.

Apart from fulfilling the Foundation Year and General Education requirements, students doing a Bachelor's degree in Development Studies must take ten other major core courses (30 credits), along with six major elective courses (18 credits). Of the remaining eleven elective courses (33 credits) which the student must take, up to a maximum of six courses (18 credits) can be from within the same College

5. INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

As civilization evolves, the relationships between countries are becoming ever more complex. This is especially so with the rapid globalization which is taking place as a result of faster and increasingly sophisticated communication systems. The situation is further complicated by a return to religious fundamentalism in many parts of the world.

The International Relations program is designed to provide students with an understanding of how nations interact with each other. This is with particular reference to Cambodia's present situation as one nation in the world at large; how this has been affected by the past; and the possible implications for the future.

Apart from fulfilling the Foundation Year and General Education requirements, students doing a Bachelor's degree in International Relations must take ten other major core courses (30 credits), along with six major elective courses (18 credits). 7. PUBLIC ADMINISTRATION

The Public Administration program aims to provide students with an understanding of theory and practice of management in the public sector; and thus to prepare students to take responsible positions in governmental organizations.

Reflecting the common underlying principles for efficient organisation and management, students doing a major in Public Administration attend the same core courses as those doing majors in the College of Management (this also maximises the graduate's flexibility when it comes to developing their careers). Thereafter, they can choose from a number of courses designed to give them insights into the particular problems associated with the routine running of the public sector and the rational implementation of policies.

Apart from fulfilling the Foundation Year and General Education requirements, students doing a Bachelor's degree in Public Administration must take ten other major core courses (30 credits), along with six major elective courses (18 credits). Of the remaining eleven elective courses (33 credits) which the student must take, up to a maximum of six courses (18 credits) can be from within the same College major elective.

College of Media and Communications

Multiple opportunities abound for students who graduate from the University of Cambodia's College of Media and Communication. Bachelor's degrees concentrate on basic but enduring practical skills related to leadership and strategies for the analysis and solving of both foreseeable and unforeseeable problems, rather than being tied down only to the present situation. The core courses would encompass essential general skills, including analytical reasoning, report writing and other forms of effective communication, and innovative thinking. In addition, there is an emphasis on ethics in media and reporting.

The College of Media and Communication offers three Bachelor's degrees in one of the following subjects including various concentrations:

Undergraduate

- ❖ College of Media and Communications

  - ▪ BA Media Arts & Studies

  - ▪ BA Visual Communications

  - ▪ BA Communication Studies

ADMISSION AND DEGREE REQUIREMENTS

In order to be admitted to study for a Bachelor's degree, an applicant must have a high school diploma or an equivalent; and take and pass the University of Cambodia Undergraduate Entrance Examination (under the auspices of the Ministry of Education, Youth and Sport) and the University of Cambodia English Placement Exam.

New students must spend their first year fulfilling the Foundation Year Program's requirements, as specified by the Accreditation Committee of Cambodia: this comprises eight General Education courses and two oriented subjects related to the student's major: JRN101 (Introduction to the History of Mass Communications) and the other one is from each respective major. A student must pass the Foundation Year in order to proceed into the second year program.

In addition to the Foundation Year and other General Education requirements set by the University of Cambodia, Bachelor's degree candidates in the College of Media and Communications are required to take a minimum of a further 63 credit hours including Practicum (the equivalent of 21 courses) in their respective major and other electives 15 credit hours (equivalent of 5 courses). One remaining course is CEX401 which students are required to take the preparation of exit comprehensive examination. Thus, in order to graduate a Bachelor Program in the College of Media and Communications students are required to take 44 courses of coursework (the equivalent to 132 credits).

1. Bachelor of Arts in Media Arts and Studies

The BA in Media Arts and Studies provides a general breadth and depth of knowledge in media and communications; it offers several concentration areas leading to the Bachelor's degree. The program is a professional degree program designed to prepare students for careers in all aspects of media, including production, media management, entertainment law, or political communications. Students are encouraged to tailor course requirements to match their own interests and talents. This is one of three Bachelor's degree options available to students in the College of Media and Communication. This degree option provides students with the opportunity to explore the world of media, from a variety of perspectives. The degree plan is arranged as such in order to cover enough materials leading to proficiency, but broad enough to have a grasp on various fields.

2. Bachelor of Arts in Visual Communications

The BA in Visual Communication offers an interdisciplinary visual communication degree. The program is designed to provide students with realistic and thorough broad-based professionally oriented training in visual communication while providing the necessary general and cultural background for a strong educational foundation. Intensive training is offered in information design for interactive electronic publication and traditional printed publication, documentary photojournalism for newspapers, magazines and the internet.
The goal of this program of study is to:

- equip students with the necessary skills to be successful in the media, and the background and motivation to enable them to compete for leadership roles in the field;
- give the students access to professionals in the field such as working photographers, editors, and other personnel, newspapers, press services, magazines, industrial photographic departments, trade associations, multimedia and educational media production units, and cultural and scientific visual communicators;
- set high standards for visual integrity and communication ethics, through the successful and rigorous reaching of media law; and
- foster and promote scholarly research and creative activities.
